FRIDAY 17TH FEBRUARY · 7PM FOR 7.30 START

Certainly we need to accept the limitations of much current dogma and keep our minds as open as we reasonably can. Sheldrake may help us to do so through this well-written, challenging and always interesting book.

In The Science Delusion, Rupert Sheldrake drags ten of the most powerful dogmas out of the basement and into the light of day; and does science, humanity and the world at large, a considerable favour.

Rupert Sheldrake, Ph.D. is a biologist and author of more than 80 scientific papers and 10 books including A New Science of Life, and Dogs that Know when their Owners are Coming Home. His groundbreaking new book The Science Delusion has just been published to wide acclaim. In his new book Dr Rupert Sheldrake shows how the sciences are being constricted by assumptions that have hardened into dogmas. Should science be a belief-system, or realm of enquiry? In the sceptical spirit of true scientific enquiry, Sheldrake turns the ten fundamental dogmas of science into questions, opening up startling new possibilities. In his new book Sheldrake argues that science would be better off without dogmas: freer, more interesting and more fun.
